

Module 6

Video-Introduction Transcript

“We have now reached the sixth and concluding module of DOTS. During the online portion of the module, you will apply as much of what you’ve learned as possible to your sample online courses. Most previous assignments were designed to help you create course elements that you can now fine-tune and bring together. The resulting draft course will ideally serve as a template for your upcoming online courses, facilitating your future course-design efforts.

You will have the opportunity to present your draft course to our group, while at the same time practicing your Wimba presentation skills. Details on this synchronous online meeting are available within the module’s materials.

Our last face-to-face meeting will include an exploration of blogs and wikis as learning tools, a technology-skills catch-up, and an outline of the course development and review steps that follow conclusion of the DOTS workshop.

It has been a pleasure facilitating this course for you and I look forward to our final wrap-up meeting on Friday.”
